ATATÜRK HOUSE MUSEUM

FOOTPRINTS OF THE GHAZI

The historic building in Konya was built in 1912 and served as a governor's mansion for a certain period of time. Mustafa Kemal Atatürk stayed in this house on his arrival to Konya and in 1927, the house was purchased by the municipality of Konya and in 1928 it was registered in the name of Atatürk as an expression of Konya's gratitude to Atatürk and it has been recorded on the deed as "A gift of inhabitants of Konya to the President Gazi Mustafa Kemal Pasha"

In 1963, one year later the building was turned over to the Ministry of Education and in the following years it was restored again and opened to visit in 1982 as the Museum of Atatürk House in its present form. Atatürk House Museum is a museum where the clothes used by Atatürk and various items he used at home when he came to Konya are exhibited. Colognes, combs, cutlery and various kitchen utensils are among the items that you can see in the museum. Each room has various objects related to Atatürk. The photographs taken at the time of his arrival in Konya, as well as notes taken in the house, newspaper clippings and the written depictions of what Atatürk had experienced during his visit to Konya are displayed at the panels on the walls.
